THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

Deacon & Peterson, Publishers.
NUMBER SIXTY-SIX SOUTH THIRD ST.

Two Dollars Per Annum, In Advance.
THREE DOLLARS IF NOT PAID IN ADVANCE.

EDMUND DEACON, HENRY PETERSON, } EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

A FAMILY NEWSPAPER: NEUTRAL IN POLITICS.

} CLUBS.—FOR TERMS TO CLUBS, SEE PROSPECTUS ON THIRD PAGE. {

DEVOTED TO MORALITY, PURE LITERATURE, FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC NEWS, AGRICULTURE, THE COMMERCIAL INTEREST, SCIENCE, ART AND AMUSEMENT.

VOLUME XXVIII. PHILADELPHIA, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1848. WHOLE NO. 1422.

Choice Poetry.

OUR BOY.

We had a child, a blue-eyed boy,
Born on a bright May morning;
A thousand pleasures were our joy
The day that child was born.
His eye was every joyous day
His lip interred music soon.
We fancied him a full grown man
Before the end of June!

Years blessed him with all joy and grace,
Oh, now we cared for him!
His laugh was like a voice in dreams,
He seemed with joy.
His glances here have gaily back,
Reading a fondness itself.
We wondered how that heart would hold
What love he bore for him!

Grew old! Yes, we had pictured him
A world-used weary one.
A dead old man with locks of grey,
Whose work of life was done;
And when we had some saying years,
Calmly and solemnly,
We fancied then our gentle one
An honored man would be!

Was the first sentence, he was old
One August afternoon.
And much we endeavored that he had
Had left his place so soon.
But as he laid him in the grave
Where he was always true,
We fancied that he was needing well
To hold better me in the valley.

"Keep thing a man can ever desire to a tasse seeming to by high
Come unto heaven yet all your fearwood and
Grow old! Yes, we had pictured him
A world-used weary one.
A dead old man with locks of grey,
Whose work of life was done;
And when we had some saying years,
Calmly and solemnly,
We fancied then our gentle one
An honored man would be!

Was the first sentence, he was old
One August afternoon.
And much we endeavored that he had
Had left his place so soon.
But as he laid him in the grave
Where he was always true,
We fancied that he was needing well
To hold better me in the valley.

He slept and woke, and now his rest
Crowned with a first light
And while his soul seemed full of day
We came and left him night.
For he was spoken would not hasten
Were anything wanted.
He spoke at rest, of calm deep rest—
We knew not what it was.

A while he lingered at a post
Where the two pathways part,
As had uncertain which to take
The nearer or the later.
The weary, regard road
That to our eyes seem the one
Of rest unrecorded God.

He turned to us a look of pain
Our company were done
And with the joy of a child and soon,
Our hearts were running after.
He smiled—he fully, gaily smile,
He spoke—our heavenly host
He stepped on his pace,
Our clasp—and he was gone!

Long by the sunshine day we watched,
Our eyes with tears blind
Not till the morning came could we
Believe we were left.
Let once again our tunes be loud
We have had now our downward lot,
Oh, we have suffered!
We often talked of him and sung,
We spoke to him and I,
We have a thousand memories of him,
Those blessedness to me.
We fancy now the sunshine and the smiles,
So frequent on his face,
That we have seen him ever!
And know we see him ever!

A Strange Story.

THE MARBLE MAN:
OR,
THE ELIXIR OF LIFE.

Some two or three years since, I was compelled to make a very similar contract of at least an hour's dead reckon, with the driver of a stage coach in the State of Connecticut, a country that, until then, I had never visited, and which, although I have since seen the dead at winter, when the snow lay deep upon the ground; and as the roads in the hilly region were very bad, and the coach heavy, we were obliged, through the drifts and over the rough frozen earth, was, to speak plain, a very dull journey. But, nevertheless, my keenness was of such importance, that I must proceed at first. I was at some town or other whose whereabouts was not exactly known, upon whose testimony, in a case then pending in one of the United States courts, I was expected to have pended the temporal happin and welfare of a whole family. I need not dilate at length, as it is sufficient to say here, that through his means, mainly, I had succeeded in obtaining a verdict for my many prosperity, were restored to some few or six worthy but mistaken people, who otherwise would have been nearly reduced to beggary, and were now the happy recipients of a handsome.

One day, I had been riding on my hired horse here me along on my return from my vexatious search, I emerged from a narrow defile in the hills, upon an open eastern hollow, into a well cultivated valley, whose level basin spread out before me like a distant lake. I had heard of it before, and knew its name, because I perceived a very comfortable looking dwelling, and a nice and extensive farm-house, not more than a mile from the city; the gentleman had inquired about while making some experiment in farming, by which science he was passionately devoted. I remembered, also, that the site of the old Indian fort, the roadside mentioned my father that his first respectable client was at least a man of wealth. His country residence was, I knew, in the valley, and I had, ignorant as I was of the country, it would not be prudent to me to generate the bridle rein upon the table in half an hour, I was shown to a tidy, well-furnished chamber, where a fire had been lighted, for the night was cold and comfortless for a table. On my return to the family-room, where the arrangements for supper were in full train, I had the inactive plenty of a substantial meal, I was presented to the wife, daughters, and son, and family of the host. The latter was a man about fifty—his brother perhaps a year or two younger; both gentlemanly, intelligent men, who had early in life acquired more of the world than was contained within their native valley. Three or four years after I would killed knock-case on one corner of the large room, and several other articles of furniture, of the most ancient description, helped me to form my opinion of my entertainer's family. When we were seated at the table, the host, who had not yet learned what happened, I found that my opinion was correct—that the spirit in the bosom of this sensible and well educated man.

I refused to rest at an early hour, and lay for a while listening to the storm which by that time had burst over the valley. The rain descended in heavy sheets, and the tall old trees around the house, mournfully in the gusts, and I could hear the sleety snow against the windows, in a manner that made me congratulate myself on having escaped out in the sheltered; and I almost wished now that the object of my journey had been accomplished, that the morning would dawn upon me with the power to bet my further progress for a day or two. I liked my entertainer and his family so well, that I was to be hasty in parting. When morning came, the snow was still falling, but silently and without wind; yet the air was fierce, showing that the ever-hanging clouds were heavily surcharged, and that the storm would continue through the day. After breakfast I made some rather feeble assertions that I must resume my journey, but my obliging friends would not hear of it. "You can't think of going on to-day," said they. In fact, I didn't, and finding myself in a close house of it, and told that I should be delighted to stay, storm or no storm. This cordial confession put me at once upon a pleasant footing, for they were kind enough to declare that a guest like your humble servant, etc., etc., was a perfect godsend to their wilderness. I soon took myself at home, and four or five days passed away in that delightful manner very pleasantly to me. had it been otherwise, I should have been forced to remain, for as deep were the snow-drifts in the gorges of the hills, it was utterly impossible for a horseman to proceed in the direction I wished to take. Towards the south-west, it was possible to leave the valley with no great difficulty.

On the second day after my arrival, I saw, looking towards that quarter, a single horseman, struggling resolutely along his ragged path, in the direction of my refuge. After a quarter of an hour he alighted at the gate, and cleared land and the length was like a team in dreams.

He seemed with me.

His glances here have gaily back.

Reading a fondness itself.

We wondered how that heart would hold

What love he bore for him!

Grew old! Yes, we had pictured him

A world-used weary one.

A dead old man with locks of grey,

Whose work of life was done;

And when we had some saying years,

Calmly and solemnly,

We fancied then our gentle one

An honored man would be!

Was the first sentence, he was old

One August afternoon.

And much we endeavored that he had

Had left his place so soon.

But as he laid him in the grave

Where he was always true,

We fancied that he was needing well

To hold better me in the valley.

"Keep thing a man can ever desire to a tasse seeming to by high

Come unto heaven yet all your fearwood and

Grow old! Yes, we had pictured him

A world-used weary one.

A dead old man with locks of grey,

Whose work of life was done;

And when we had some saying years,

Calmly and solemnly,

We fancied then our gentle one

An honored man would be!

Was the first sentence, he was old

One August afternoon.

And much we endeavored that he had

Had left his place so soon.

But as he laid him in the grave

Where he was always true,

We fancied that he was needing well

To hold better me in the valley.

He slept and woke, and now his rest

Crowned with a first light

And while his soul seemed full of day

We came and left him night.

For he was spoken would not hasten

Were anything wanted.

He spoke at rest, of calm deep rest—

We knew not what it was.

A while he lingered at a post

Where the two pathways part,

As had uncertain which to take

The nearer or the later.

The weary, regard road

That to our eyes seem the one

Of rest unrecorded God.

He turned to us a look of pain

Our company were done

And with the joy of a child and soon,

Our hearts were running after.

He smiled—he fully, gaily smile,

He spoke—our heavenly host

He stepped on his pace,

Our clasp—and he was gone!

Long by the sunshine day we watched,

Our eyes with tears blind

Not till the morning came could we

Believe we were left.

Let once again our tunes be loud

We have had now our downward lot,

Oh, we have suffered!

We often talked of him and sung,

We spoke to him and I,

We have a thousand memories of him,

Those blessedness to me.

We fancy now the sunshine and the smiles,

So frequent on his face,

That we have seen him ever!

And know we see him ever!

"But what are the conditions?" asked my host, with a perfect gladness in their substance. I soon took myself at home, and four or five days passed away in that delightful manner very pleasantly to me. had it been otherwise, I should have been forced to remain, for as deep were the snow-drifts in the gorges of the hills, it was utterly impossible for a horseman to proceed in the direction I wished to take. Towards the south-west, it was possible to leave the valley with no great difficulty.

On the second day after my arrival, I saw, looking towards that quarter, a single horseman, struggling resolutely along his ragged path, in the direction of my refuge. After a quarter of an hour he alighted at the gate, and cleared land and the length was like a team in dreams.

He seemed with me.

His glances here have gaily back.

Reading a fondness itself.

We wondered how that heart would hold

What love he bore for him!

Grew old! Yes, we had pictured him

A world-used weary one.

A dead old man with locks of grey,

Whose work of life was done;

And when we had some saying years,

Calmly and solemnly,

We fancied then our gentle one

An honored man would be!

Was the first sentence, he was old

One August afternoon.

And much we endeavored that he had

Had left his place so soon.

But as he laid him in the grave

Where he was always true,

We fancied that he was needing well

To hold better me in the valley.

"Keep thing a man can ever desire to a tasse seeming to by high

Come unto heaven yet all your fearwood and

"These—that you shall, upon my delivery to you of the papers, hand me a receipt in full, in your own and second house, in use all ordinary diligence in improving and increasing this property, by fair, honorable and generous means—living yourself, in the meanwhile, as becomes the possessor of a like property. And if, at any time within sixty years, I shall, in person, or by my legally authorized representative, demand my property again, you shall deliver to me, or to such representative, two-thirds of what they then remain in you of what I deliver to you, together with two-thirds of the increase thereof, if any such there be. And you shall also pledge your honor and sacred word, that at a proper time you shall, by will, give to your eldest son or daughter, at the expiration of the period of your death, handing him, in the like manner as yourself, to deliver to me, or to my representatives, as I have said, two-thirds of my property and two-thirds of its increase, if properly applied as I have directed. Do you accept from me the trust on these conditions?"

"My father hesitated, argued, suggested, objected, pondered, considered, and meditated, and while his friend refused to alter in any respect what he had arranged and written down, and while he refused to accept pledge were given, and my father became the possessor of property worth about twenty thousand dollars, and I received a watch more than twice that amount, for we have met with honest in our time, headed living at no moderate rate. The next day after the delivery of the deeds, the friend set my father him an affectionate farewell. It is now forty-nine years ago, and from that day to this, we have never had the slightest evidence of his vexations, or that we had been deceived. It was my father's subsequent belief that the conditions were complied with after his gift, and that he was no doubt really cousin, although apparently in his right mind. At any rate, he was a man of honor, and that he would one day appear, again, or be heard from—though, if living now, he would be near ninety years of age.

"When I became eighteen, I gave the same pledge to my father that he had given to his friend, and of my son, when he reached the same period of life. I gave him, in turn, a watch, and he held our lands and whole possessions in trust for another. You are now entertained, gentlemen, of what I deemed it and 'it is not mine!' In case do I reason that it is a thousand pounds to one watch? I am merely bound to deliver up my trust—so long as I cannot look over my estate and say it is mine. I view the greater portion of my wealth as given. Man in a landed estate, and the sense of love is within you—the love of justice. My father considered he died a farmer, or a handsome estate—he do not like to share; and I, to bequeath better—more valuable property. One would think that a lease of land for one hundred and ninety-nine years, at a peppercorn rent, was a very secure, but how few out of ten would rather pay something considerable for a lease of that length, than for a fee? Many a landstand very well the feelings of the antecedents, and would not like to be considered as living in a most nominal—they are their children will ever be disturbed in their possession—the difficulty is, they know not when. I, for my part, am content to feel sure and independent of their fellow-men, and to look forward to the end of the term of sixty years with a calm satisfaction. Some few years ago, I took leave of my friend, and, when he reached the same period of life, I gave him

Selected Sketch.

FROM GRAHAM'S MAGAZINE.

SCENE ON THE SUSQUEHANNA

BY JOSEPH R. CHANDLER.

Darker than the darkness of the folds in the hunter hall, I was, in obedience to an imperious summons, ushered into the presence of the Governor. The hurried glance which I had given, with delighted eye, to the rich furniture of the room, had, for the moment, withdrawn the attention from the person of the Governor, to which one gentleman, who was sitting at a table, and three who were standing, directed their attention. I seated myself in an obscure corner, and there was effect to nerve at these proceedings. I perceived at once that I had been summoned in the absence of a republican, whose motives, to be effective, must begin in the out of the Governor, or to be instantly operative if sent continue in conference with that will. Mine, therefore, was a mere passive attention, and I gave them every power and opportunity to control the subject of their deliberations. I could; nor was this unreasonable, for one had not yet been delivered to the parties; the cruelty and intelligence between the members of the house partly, who should be the candidate elected, and the Governor. Besides, the efforts of the main divisions would unite, and the hostility be transferred from sections of the same party to the parties themselves, the former the field of conflict, and of course not taken there, as the Governor of Pennsylvania, and the Governor of Maryland, and the thronged streets were a lively appearance of pleasure and hope.

Assuming early one morning at the door of the hotel, before the customary hour of rising, it was struck with a little presence of the Governor, who was the centre of the place. A stern woman led the woman, in childish hope, by the hand; two of whom, and the youngest, each carried a child; and in the rear was a very tall man, bearing in his arms a young child, apparently with pretty of a negro female slave. The men by his height and command bound show attention particularly to himself. The appearance of the whole was that of an intercession of extraordinary publicity; and the anxiousness of the search of its principal men, and of those who had a spirit of sympathy with them, and felt that whatever might be his appearance, he was, for a time at least, above the influence of ordinary circumstances. I was myself interested, and for some time I lost sight of them, and of the hotel, but the peculiar look of the woman and the remarkable trend of the man would have fixed them in my memory, had I met with a stranger, before I saw a gathering in front of a public building, and having to hear the remarks of those who spoke unreservedly, I joined the Governor's company. In course was the head of immigration. It was evident that some considerable degree of sympathy had been engendered by the kindness of some

United States SATURDAY POST.

Philadelphia:

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1842.

THE FRANKLIN INSTITUTE.

Having heard that the exhibition this year was not as good as common, we were surprised upon walking through it to find so many new and handsome displays of the products of the metal and ornamental trades before us. In the way, one was always the best carpet, Philadelphia, and for that matter, Pennsylvania, and the Union, have reason to be proud that such exhibitions can be collected, bearing witness, as they do, to American skill, ingenuity and enterprise. We are pleased to learn that the interest in these exhibitions does not slacken from year to year, but that the public show by their attendance at them, that they appreciate at its proper value everything that tends to encourage American industry.

We are indebted to the reporter of the Ledger for descriptions of some of the articles of this exhibition, which either for their being of recent invention, or for other reasons, we think most likely to interest our readers. It would occupy too much of our space, to give descriptions of all the articles of interest. Pieces of all varieties, mercury of various kinds, furniture, pianos, daguerreotypes, &c. &c., are displayed in great numbers. The daguerreotypes, especially, there is a large assortment. Rose, England & Gross, McClee & Co., Jones, Longenheim, &c., are the principal contributors. Rose has various daguerreotypes of the moon of which by means of a telescope are more beautiful than the statue itself. There has been a vast improvement in this branch of art, since its invention by Daguerre.

The New England Car Company, of Boston, exhibit a number of springs for cars, &c. Also, a model of spherical masses of lignum vitæ, for the purpose of sustaining vessels upright. They are capable of sustaining immense weights, and are considered of great importance and useful inventions.

The American Watch Case Company exhibit a mass of this new gum, with a number of machine tools, and specimens of cases, variously mouldings, ornaments, &c., made from it. They were deposited by John Wood, Clement and Dunbar, and attract much attention. The gums are particularly good.

Charles C. Cunningham, Jersey exhibits a new and improved machine for moulding and pressing bricks, which may be easily worked by a child, and performs the business of several hands. Several specimens of bricks are exhibited, which appear to work to fully what is claimed for them.

Mr. Hall, from Pawsbury Company of South Boston, exhibits a small model of a machine for Haviland & Tuttle's patent cornice wool waiter which appears to be a very useful and simple labor saving invention. The model consists of a glass cylinder, in which the wheel is suspended, the water passing through valves in the circumference of the cylinder, and the cornice is supported by brackets at each end.

F. S. Myers, of New York city, exhibits a very simple and useful water gauge—patent magnetic—made by George W. Carlisle, Cincinnati. The gauge, the height of water is indicated by the floating of a piece of magnetic metal, surmounting magnetic rod, which has a square closed enclosing an upper or arrow to register the water level outside of the apparatus.

John McClintock, Quarry street, exhibits two or his sweeping machines, which are worked by a lever, and are exceedingly simple, and they are capable of performing a great deal of work very accurately and with little labor. One of these machines for pulling spokes to the fellows of a wheel, which is very complete, as to the use of which the machine deserves the special attention of carpenters and wheelwrights.

William Knapp, Jr., of Ithaca, New York, exhibits a model of a machine for making pins, which is certainly a great step and a great advance in mechanical ingenuity. It cuts out the shanks and rounds and points them in course of a second, and then presents them in the barrel or bag, and prepares them for the next slight touches of the file, in a manner which cannot fail to greatly, while at expenses, increase the profits of the pin manufacturer. It was invented since three years ago, but is entirely new in this country.

Charles Green, of this city, exhibits one of Fitzgerald's portable Portable Rolling Mills, and other steel, which in a useful invention to the manufacturer of steel, and will be found of the best class of utilities.

A prominent feature among the machinery is the Steel Manufactory of Messrs. Fenton, Murray and Wood, Fellows, a Philadelphian by birth, but now a resident of Montreal. The process of forging, which by the application of steam to the cranes, which is almost the same. The process of rolling is also the same as it does by it, is rolled into, or in the variety

Selected Poetry.

VERSICLES

(For Yankee and Muskie Club of an Indian Daughter's Fine Wedding.)

BY JAMES GORDON BENNETT.

She 1 undersea lives on?
Off by the silvery sea?
Faith! well! Oh, she needs no dowry!
Will she wander on the shore?
Not a trudging saving squaw for me!
Will she learn to cram or spell?
Not a common soul to mock at!
Will she dance?
Pad moccasin soon like a fay.
Sandy, can I have her?
Of marrying time!

Pipe and softly—and will she?
Little heels, feet and'll is pretty,
In thy new-born power and pride,
Of the untaught forest bred,
Lurching, through, from side to side,
Pride and mind, leaves a void,
Like a tipsy church-setting,
Of who dances many feet?
Smile like these, or e'en get tipsy?
Feet and ankles true to be
Sandy, can I have her?
Of marrying time!

Heem a-reaction! steady, steady!
Hey, the dooper's put closely!
Thew, with gentle course, untwisted,
Thine finger fall well hast dotted,
Sails Point her shot aimed,
Sails by Reaction's blind hand,
And an unerring word and truly
On for Closer Reef ahead!

Another note, or turn in time.
Ere within the torrid zone
Which the tropic feeder bounds,
And with fiery passion's zone,
Turn time, weary little vessel,
Turn time, weary little vessel!
Turn done to safe cruise
By the sweetly sheltering smile
Of thine own Reverend friend
In the haven of dear rest
Produced by the dawning breast.
And the crew ready hour
Of a mother true to thee
Or a mother true to be!

Nay, adventurous little ship!
If thine mother's still a-trip,
And, instead of port, she dances
Such another tolerant cruise,
If 'morrow's be taken may lend thee,
On ! my treasure! and God speed thee!
Hardowned as, much more lonely
Were thou more to me than so
Far from an encounter by
Headiness or lightly slip.
Ere! If thy whose mate I take
Thee, my dear one, for thy sake,
In this swearing site strain,
Knows I not ; for I am "a."
But as in a person's proper
Time Rise to honor and space!

Perilous Adventure.

A RIDE ACROSS MEXICO.

FROM THE NATIONAL INTELLIGENCER.

To the Editor of the National Intelligencer:

The recent arrival of Passed Midshipman Edward Fitzgerald Beale from the Western coast, together with the unanimous note which he brings of the discovery, over at least, of the western slope of the Sierra Nevada, of the real Dorado—as long searched for as ever our continental—had already been noted in your paper. A brief account of his ride, full of hazard, and accomplished with such extreme gallantry and spirit, is due to the service which this brave, enterprising young officer adorns, and will, at the same time, exemplify the deplorable condition of government and police throughout Mexico.

Midshipman Beale left the port of La Paz, near the foot of the Peninsula of California, on the 1st of August; and on the 5th arrived at Mazatlan, on the west coast of Mexico. He there took passage in a small Mexican galeot, and after a terrible cruising voyage of five days, in which he was not only known of the coast, he made the harbor at San Blas. At this place commenced his land journey, southeast one thousand miles, by way of Guadalajara and Mexico city, to Vera Cruz. It was with much difficulty that he got away, as rumors were it held by the Mexican Governor at San Blas and every body else, travelling from supposed he would be waylaid and murdered by some of the numerous bands of lawless robbers that at this time, more than ever, in consequence of the dispersion of the troops of Paredes, line all the public roads in Mexico. Having undertaken the duty however, nothing could daunt or detain our gallant young officer; and accordingly on the 12th of July he started.

He travelled without any other escort than a guide; his plan being to ride at full speed, both day and night, and thus accomplish his journey in the shortest practicable time, and so escape with the danger of the road by the rapidity of his trot.

His wardrobe for the journey consisted—he might as the top—of a Mexican glazed cambric hat, a pair of serape blanket, a pair of Mexican leather breeches, and terminating in a pair of the hide boots of the country. In this costume, not much unlike the Spanish muleteer, and semi-brother ago, and speaking Spanish, he was the courier part of a native of the country; for his dishonorable exotic was of another sort, and eminently American—fine revolvers, six barrels each, and a knife could only be packed on the person at a genuine American respecting danger and determined to go through it.

Thus accoutred, young Beale left San Blas on the 12th of August. He stood travelling, not for the formidable character of his costume, he accomplished the five sixty miles without serious interruption. Here, at a sudden turn of the road a peremptory call of "alto, ola!" "Ho!—hal!—there" —brought one of his revolvers to bear upon a party of three genus de cuerno—people of the road—who had drawn up in the road. To these line of the guard, they demanded his passport under pretense of being road robbers. The bold rider, after reversing in their own tongue, "you, you are on my passport; one of you come and get it!" Advancer paciey, the party appeared content to go off, but Beale insisted that it was their duty to examine his passport, and that he meant to force them to turn their backs before they had done so. Under this intimation, the leader of the party, with Beale's revolver drawing a bead upon him at a station against treachery, approached within arm's length, and having received the paper, and at the same time the information that the revolver, with which "Senor Inglese" was already acquainted, was not one of four, equally ready for service. The rebel was two immediate prisoner to surrender to the young an American officer; and the whole party were ready at once to turn back, or to turn off by another road. Beale, however, insisted that his safety was in having them behind him, intimated his gentlemanly intention to accompany; and, after some hesitation, they passed on in front of him, under the menaces of the revolver, which he kept ready when he put his horse to speed, and was soon beyond reach of pursuit.

At Tepic, the dangers of the road had become so imminent, and he was so constantly assured that he could not fail to be attacked on the way, or probably lose his life, that he determined at least to pursue the remainder of his journey by the more important desperation to the Government. He therefore, though not without fear at request from the Department, he should not get through, opened those papers, copied them, and, with a note to the American Minister, sent them across the country, on sickness, or ordinary letters, in the mail. These would arrive, were should be be murdered on the way, and the enigmas thus be lost.

He continued his journey, travelling both night and day, with about one hour for rest each night by throwing himself on the muddy ground, in the brief intervals of ten or twelve minutes occasioned at each post in bringing out fresh horses and closing up the saddles. Two days' journey the other side of Guadalajara, a tarde (gap) came out of the woods in his rear, just at nightfall, and, discerning him, gave chase. Beale had now passed the first time but short time his heels, (in case their espionage was good enough to see them,) since the darkness would protect the judicious use of his revolvers, or what he depended on the day. He accordingly increased his wonted rapid pace, expecting speedily to distance his pursuers; but they were not easily shaken off. They continued in close some hours, and frequently the foremost once gained upon his sufficient to fire their carbines at his back; but he at length made good his way to the next post.

Having heard of a party of eleven travellers ahead of him, Beale made speed to overtake them, for the greater security of travelling in company. This party was attacked by a large band of robbers before arriving at Guadalajara, and on the day following his night pursuit, Beale came up to the scene of the encounter. The whole party of travellers had been killed or wounded, and the blood was still fresh in the store which it had formed, the robbers having just been scared.

From Guadalajara Beale departed at six o'clock in the evening, choosing that time for starting, both to avoid travelling by night, and in order that his departure might be the more secret. He made the distance to the village of Lagos (fifty-five leagues—one hundred and sixty miles) in twenty-seven and a-half hours, arriving there at half-past nine of the night following his departure from Guadalajara. It was the rainy season, so he had expected and had the way to be the time of the setting Guadalajara it set in with full force. The unparalleled fury of the storms which prevail in this part of Mexico in the height of the rainy season, is noted by every traveller in that country. The road by night is often rendered only by the intense glare of lightning, which, though its flashes are nearly incessant, leaves moments of pitchy darkness. The torrents of rain which fall tear up rocks and trees on the mountain sides, and wash them down into the valleys. The water-courses, from the same cause, become frightfully deep and rapid, so that the passage of the streams which must be forded in the latter part of the journey, and which he had before passed with ease, became impassable. In the face of the storm, and of the imminent danger of being swept away with his horse, Beale undertook to cross the river Lerma, which was then impassable, and succeeded in swimming his horse to the opposite bank. The next day he reached the city of Mexico.

This ride of upwards of seven hundred miles, performed in the short space of five days and a-half, is the most remarkable one that has been performed in Mexico, and is the more remarkable from the fact that it was undertaken and accomplished entirely alone. Mr. Beale's object was to avoid attracting attention, and he therefore refused the escort of dragoons which was offered him by the Government. He was, however, followed by a party of eight men, who, from the first, had been employed by the robbers to watch his movements, and who, had they known his journey, must either have attacked him by the way, or have given information which would have caused him to be murdered in the city. Of the existence of this party he was informed by a friend, who, from motives of friendship, followed him from Guadalajara, and who, by the same means, discovered the object of the party. This friend, however, did not know the number of the party, in any case, and Beale, therefore, could not, with any safety, have attempted to turn upon them. If we have not been misinformed, the Government has since taken measures to punish the robbers who attacked the party of travellers.

This ride of upwards of seven hundred miles, performed in the short space of five days and a-half, is the most remarkable one that has been performed in Mexico, and is the more remarkable from the fact that it was undertaken and accomplished entirely alone. Mr. Beale's object was to avoid attracting attention, and he therefore refused the escort of dragoons which was offered him by the Government. He was, however, followed by a party of eight men, who, from the first, had been employed by the robbers to watch his movements, and who, had they known his journey, must either have attacked him by the way, or have given information which would have caused him to be murdered in the city. Of the existence of this party he was informed by a friend, who, from motives of friendship, followed him from Guadalajara, and who, by the same means, discovered the object of the party. This friend, however, did not know the number of the party, in any case, and Beale, therefore, could not, with any safety, have attempted to turn upon them. If we have not been misinformed, the Government has since taken measures to punish the robbers who attacked the party of travellers.

Wit and Humor.

LIFE INSURANCE.

The Philadelphian correspondent of Beckett's Newspaper gives the following account of a visit to one of Life Insurance offices, and expressed a wish to have his life insured. It was after office hours, but he was told that by paying a fee he could be accommodated. The attendant took a seat at a desk, and commenced his task, by asking the following questions:

"Your name, sir?"

"Thomas."

"Thomas—what?"

"Thomas Jones."

"Thomas—Jones—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith."

"Thomas Jones Smith—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith—what?"

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan Thomas Jones Smith Brown."

"Thomas Jones Smith Brown Robinson Thompson Johnson Williams Jackson Harrison Wilkinson Davis Edwards Morgan